people showed up.
Here are the 5 things
they left knowing.

Things most pharma grads never get told.

1

Your degree is an entry ticket. Not a ceiling.

It opens more doors than the three you were shown at graduation.

2

The gap isn't talent. It's exposure.

People miss these careers because nobody ever put them on the table.

3

Your pharma experience is a head start.

The clinical fluency you already have is what device companies hire for.

4

Most CVs get filtered in 60 seconds.

Usually for how the experience is written, not the experience itself.

5

You don't have to start over.

The move is repositioning what you already know, not throwing it away.
